Farmer Jolly Takes a Flyer

BY DELL MILITORE

Well, Ben an' Nina, Ma an' I sure hed a gela day. Drove in t' see th' races—some thirty miles away. "THE FISHATORIUM AND OYSTERORIUM" we'd read Upon a sign above a door—an' such a meal about Ma! An' then we drove up to th' grounds so we could get a place To park our cars in plenty time before they'd start t' race.

The folks want in th' grand-stand but th' day was fine an' bright I said, "I'll wait an' smoke a spell," an' starts my pipe to light. Th' sun was warm an' shiny—an' th' sort an' balm' air Combined with my big dinner made me drowsy—I declare! Th' last thing I remember clear was off there in th' stand Th' tune Star Spangled Banner by the Military band.

I sort o' slipped my moorin's an' I sailed away in dreams—An' dreamed that I was ridin' round an' that I me it seems Instead of mudguards o'er th' wheels were funny lookin' things An' Lo, behold! It dawned on me th' bloomin' car hed wings! It whirled along until th' wings hed slowly filled with wind An' then it rose an' flew away an' I just sat an' grinned.

I flew away across th' fields an' kep' on risin' higher Until I flew off over town—above its highest spire. An' waited onward by th' wind with clouds on either hand (I didn't dare t' look straight down I was so far fr'm land An' surely was exultant for I'd always longed t' fly) I came to Jacob's ladder on my journey through th' sky.

I spiraled round th' ladder there an' higher still I went Until I came to streets o' gold an' I was some intent On gettin' in. 'Twas screened on top so I flew back an' to. Saint Peter stood near peary gates an' said, "How-do-ye-do? I'm glad t' see you! Mr. Jolly—bring your car inside An' I'll give you plenty friends in here, jest give them all a ride."

An' back an' forth on streets o' gold we rode through Paradise An' visited some furious till Peter said real nice "You stay here but you couldn't keep th' car. Each angel wants a runabout—they'd sell their wings at par! An' wing-less angels sure would be a queer sight to behold—An' if each hed an auto 't would be hard on streets o' gold!"

Well, Sir, I'd seen so many friends, to stay I'd half a mind But couldn't jest abandon my good car so I declined. "Goodbye!" An' when I started off they crowded round an' called "Goodbye!" An' woked up to hear you stay here but you couldn't keep th' car. "SLOW! SLOW! TAKE BACK ON TH' OUTSIDE!" Mister Coers smoked his cigar—

Th' race was on! The world was good! An' I still hed my car!

WHY?

Do the WISCONSIN COLLEGES ASSOCIATED, at this time, ask the citizens of Wisconsin for $1,000,000 per year for five years?

BECAUSE

Practically every American college is in distress. Harvard, Princeton, Cornell, with endowments ranging from twenty to thirty million dollars, are projecting campaigns of from eight to fifteen million dollars, Leland Stanford, Jr., University, the University of Chicago and others, with immense foundations, which under normal conditions, had proved adequate, or nearly so, for buildings and maintenance, are now appealing to the people for support.

BECAUSE of the decrease in the purchasing power of the dollar. A dollar now purchases what 47c did before the war.

BECAUSE all commodities have increased in cost. The coal bill alone of one college in Wisconsin has increased $9,000 per year. This means $60,000 to $75,000 removed from productive funds for legitimate college claims and lost at a time of great need.

BECAUSE chemicals, books, wages have all taken a great upward jump.

BECAUSE the faculty members, underpaid before the war, now find themselves, in many cases, in distress. This devoted group, so valuable to Wisconsin, must have relief. Before the war, they lived on their salaries with difficulty; now, it is impossible.

BECAUSE of the enormous increase in the demand for education.

BECAUSE these colleges have an increased enrollment this year of more than 2,000 students.

BECAUSE the Government and war conditions created a desire for education in practically every soldier and sailor.

BECAUSE we have a two years' accumulation of students—men who were in the service of their country.

BECAUSE the colleges met a crisis in the world's history contributing 80% of all officers, scientists and specialists in the Great War.

BECAUSE every student enrolled adds potential power, influence, production, wealth to Wisconsin.

BECAUSE the State is offering $30 per month to help education, and thousands are taking advantage of it, thus increasing the task of the colleges.

BECAUSE every added student is a financial liability of from $150 to $600 per year which the colleges must provide.

BECAUSE we have had an enormous increase in the number of high schools; the last ten years has been an era of advance in high schools. These schools turn their output into the colleges.

BECAUSE there has been a great advance in the percentage of high school graduates, who are going to college. This has added hundreds annually to the college enrollment and the number is increasing.

BECAUSE the troubled world needs balanced thought, intellectual, trained leadership.

BECAUSE the country needs poise. The country needs calm deliberation. The country needs progressive, upward-looking, independent thinking men, but it needs that they should be safe-guarded and balanced by the fundamental foundations of Christian civilization.

BECAUSE the colleges have a right to call upon the citizens of Wisconsin.

BECAUSE thus far, a large percentage of the financial backing has come from the people of other states.

BECAUSE Wisconsin is no longer a pioneer state. It is the great advanced Central Western Commonwealth.

BECAUSE for several decades, these colleges have relieved the strain upon the tax-payer.

BECAUSE if 6,000 or more students in these Associated Colleges were thrown on the state, we should be compelled either to refuse to care for them or double the capacity at the State University and at least double the annual appropriation.

BECAUSE these colleges are thus saving the tax payer at least $3,000,000 per year.

BECAUSE there is invested in buildings and endowments more than $18,000,000 which sum must be supplemented immediately to make it produce proper results for the state.

BECAUSE America must maintain her sacrificial spirit of war times. We must sustain the spirit of team work, of co-operation and of harmony. We must pull together in the interests of the common good.

BECAUSE great American enterprises, which set aside their programs and their claims during the war, must now be solidly backed up.

BECAUSE America was never so rich and never so prosperous as she is today.

BECAUSE the after-war problems are the most serious and critical problems which the country has ever faced. The college is one of the most able exponents of civilization.

BECAUSE the teaching profession, the Christian ministry and priesthood, in fact all altruistic work needs this group of colleges to help maintain the supply which the state so seriously requires.

BECAUSE Wisconsin is on record before the country. No venture in the field of higher education has attracted such widespread admiration or has been followed with keener interest throughout the country.

BECAUSE the United States Government has placed its seal of approval on this enterprise, on account of its bearing upon the other states and the far-reaching effect its success would have.

BECAUSE the press throughout the country is placing Wisconsin in a class by herself for her forward looking, daring enterprise.

BECAUSE the needs have been determined by conservative men in the face of greatly increased enrollments and reduced incomes.

BECAUSE the funds will be administered by Trustees comprising many of the most careful business men in the central west.

BECAUSE these nine colleges are the equivalent of another great university in the State of Wisconsin.

BECAUSE the combined student body maintains about an equal size with the state university.

BECAUSE there are 450 trained minds on the faculties.

BECAUSE the output of this teaching staff is one of the most important and valuable contributions to the greater and better Wisconsin.

BECAUSE the churches of America are raising funds which will aggregate more than five hundred million dollars for extension.

BECAUSE this money cannot be wisely spent without trained Christian personnel.

BECAUSE the task of providing this type of personnel falls largely on colleges of this type.

BECAUSE state supported schools can do their best work only as they are supported by independent colleges which are voluntarily maintained.

GRENA GREEN.

"Grena Green seems about to revert once more to a figure of speech," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society, commencing upon the London dispatches which tell of the closing down of the vast cordons built there early in the world war.

"To most Americans the words may never have meant much more than a nick-name for any rendezvous of eloping couples, but there is a real Grena Green. Twice has it been conspicuous among English towns, once when its chief industry was matrimony and again when, as a war renegade, it started making a new kind of high explosive.

"Now, like Hopewell, Virginia, it is about to sink into obscurity, with the end of its war contracts, which represented an investment of some $50,000,000 in our money, and the employment of more than 6,000 workers.

"Grena Green is a village in Scotland, tiny except for its munitions boom, less than 2 mile from the River Sark, which marks the England-Scotland boundary line in that vicinity, near the Solway Firth, and about nine miles northwest of Carlisle. Upon its proximity to the border line rests its first claim to fame, for the English marriage laws sent eloping couples to Scotland just as the divorce laws sent some 47 of our states make Reno desirable for would-be divorcees.

"Before 1754 Fleet Prison was the figurative Grena Green of England. Until that time the English law recognized marriages as valid so long as they were performed by clergymen of any denomination but it imposed a fine upon clergymen who would perform the ceremony for couples who had not proclaimed their intentions either by banns or license.

"Such fines had no terrors, of course, for clergymen imprisoned in Fleet for debt, and some of them undertook to marry couples who wished to avoid the expense of the customary public ceremony. Less scrupulous persons soon took advantage of this example, and tavern keepers fitted up places where they brought couples to be married by the 'Fleet parsons', and in some cases young women of means were brought there forcibly by soldiers of fortune, and women of the under world lured men there for marriage as an easy means of compelling their husband-victims to pay their debts.

"These abuses were checked by the famous Harwicke act of 1754, which made unauthorized marriages voidable, and thereupon Grena Green became the romance spot of the British Isles. All the Scotch law required was that two persons should declare their intention to be married in the presence of witnesses; and the British law then, as now, recognized marriages as legal as long as they conformed to the laws in the places they were consummated.

"At Grena Green, as in Fleet prison, were persons who exercised cupidity at the expense of Cupid; and innkeepers, ferrymen, and tollhouse tenders exploited the couples who fled to Grena Green. Any witnesses would have served, but the 'professional witnesses' there, like the 'marrying parsons' of some American towns, engaged 'touts' to bring couples to them; and when the railroad from Glasgow to Carlisle started running the station platform at Grena Green thronged with these obnoxious 'commission men'.

"A pioneer of this unique industry was John Linton, formerly a valet to Sir John Gresham, described as a 'man of fine presence and manners', and another, a Mr. Beattie, was a personable adventurer. But later traffickers were ne'er-do-wells and town drunkards.

"According to popular legend, blacksmith shops were favorite meeting places for eloping couples, but authority is lacking for the stories of smithies who would pause while shoeing horses to help legalize marriages. Many famous Englishmen were married at Grena Green, among them Lord Eldon and Lord Brougham, both of whom later became Lord Chancellor, and Lord Erskine, while he was chancellor; Charles Mannors Sutton, who afterward was Archbishop of Canterbury, and Lord Westmoreland and Miss Child, the latter a daughter of the man who founded Child's bank.

"During the three decades when Grena Green flourished, there were more than 7,000 marriages recorded there, nearly 800 of which were performed in 1855, the year before Scotland enacted a law which made a three weeks' residence a requisite to marriage.

"Marriage by declaration still is legal in Scotland, and it is interesting to note that our own marriage laws deviate from the English common law in respect to marriage, and the provisions of most states follow more closely the Scotch law in this respect. As in Scotland, every state has made some provision for previous residence, obtaining a license, or registration, but there is the widest leeway permitted for the form of the actual ceremony.

"Only seven years ago publicity was given the marriage of two young people at Cambridge, Mass., who wrote their own marriage service and had it repeated to them by a justice of the peace, whereupon that official pronounced them man and wife thus, 'Since you wish to unite in marriage, and have notified each other of the same before me and these witnesses, I now, by virtue of the authority vested in me, pronounce you man and wife.'

LEG WORK OR HEAD WORK?

Every now and then a county agent issues a report of the number of miles he has travelled in his tin Lizzie visiting farmers, the number of days spent, the blow-out patches up, the tires worn out, the letters written, stamps used, bad bugs run down, pants ripped getting over fences, cuss words expended, and so on, and so on, or something like that. There may be an error on the class of duties, but not on the number.

It is interesting, and no doubt helps the agent, who certainly has no snap, helping everybody in demonstrating his importance to the community in which he serves. No doubt when Jim Smith or some other farmer reads how the agent has been burning up the roads and the rubber, he will not feel so aggrieved that he did not receive a call and $25 worth of advice in return for a chicken dinner. All these things have to be considered from a local standpoint and the county agent really should be trusted to handle such matters.

There is the other side, also. Some folks, not excluding some very level-headed county agents, have remarked that there was a possibility of the agent trying to cover too much territory. For instance, the agent need not visit a score of farms to make sure that there is a scourge of army worms abroad after he has found them on five or six farms in a community and the reports by telephone or otherwise from the others confirm the presence of the pest. He had better get busy organizing the fight.

It's not necessary to run a county agent all over his

WHEN NIGHT SLIPS DOWN.

When night slips down and the lights are lit
And the cares of the day are done,
It is then I am ready to romp a bit
And share in the children's fun.
It is then I can be what I want to be
And do what I like to do,
With never an eye that shall frown on me,
For the shame of the day is through.

I can drop the pose that a man must wear
As he stands at his post by day,
I can turn my back on the round of care
And forget what the world may say.
I can stretch full length on the parlor floor
And roll with a little boy
And be myself for an hour or more
In a wonderful spell of joy.

For the busy life is a life of sham
And stern are the rules it makes;
It shackles and fetters the man I am
Till the soul of me fairly aches.
It bids me walk in a certain way
And dress in a certain style.
I must keep in mind what the world may say
And cheat for a stranger's smile.

But I drop the sham when the day is o'er
And I slip from the irksome pose;
I can be myself when I shut my door
On the world with its cares and woes.
And I thank my God when the night slips down
For those wonderful hours of rest
When I need not work for the world's renown
But may do what I like the best.

Combining Pleasure With Business.

Treasury Stores

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN, Director
Janesville Daily Gazette Information Bureau,
Washington, D. C.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 8.—Washington's newest retail store, now in the second week of a promising career, is located in the post-basement of the Treasury building. To reach it you descend two flights below the main floor, and travel about a quarter of a mile by way of marble-lined corridors, and through the maze of the Treasury building, the "Mysteries of Utopia."

But the store, when you get to it, is surprisingly like any crossroad store in the country. It sells all sorts of groceries and salt meats, and also clothing and shoes and various other articles in the dry goods line. There is no difference between this store and a good many other stores in the prices. They are lower here. Rice that is selling for 12 cents up on the surface of the earth may be purchased down here for 15 cents. A standard brand of coffee that brings the retailer from 35 cents a pound may be bought down here for 45 cents. Seventy-five-cent butter may be purchased for 65 cents.

Clothing Savings Large.
These samples are typical of the savings on food which this store offers, but the savings on clothing are much larger. One day a certain woman who had just bought a coat in a retail store came into this basement haven of the hurried consumer, and saw that the store was offering for sale. She asked the price. It was $20 less than she had paid. She went loudly and had to be comforted by the manager.

This is the only untoward incident which has marred the even tenor of the store's subterranean existence. It occurred on the day when the store offered for sale. All of the six thousand subscribers who have a right to buy at this store made a simultaneous drive for that sugar. It was a mad rush, and the general manager had to make a speech and lock up the rest of the sugar in the office safe before order could be restored. He says that the store will not offer any more sugar for sale until it has twelve thousand pounds on hand.

As you may have guessed by this time, the store is a co-operative store. It was organized with the aid and assistance of the secretary of the Treasury department and its allied departments. Each of these has clipped in $5. It was by J. G. McGrath, who is the grandfather of the community store idea in Washington.

Store Is One of Three.
This store is the basement of the Treasury building is only one of three that are under Mr. McGrath's management. A second is already operating in the city of New York, and a third is doing a good business. The third is to be in the bureau of engraving and printing, and is now being organized.

These stores are conducted on exactly the same basis as any other retail stores, except that they do not have to pay the usual retail prices. The store manager gives them space free of charge. That is one reason why they can offer food cheaper than the retailer, of course. On the other hand they are operating on a small capital, so far, and cannot get the discounts that go with large orders. It has been figured out that the store can operate on this basis, because the company pays back 15 cents on every dollar for an order of a certain size. The store manager does not show anywhere on paper.

Soil 700 Articles.
The Treasury stores are now selling about 700 different articles, but they will get almost anything that a subscriber wants. By making the order for a single article part of a large order, the store management is usually able to get a wholesale price. Thus one woman wanted a Hudson seal coat trimmed in heaven. It could be bought in a Washington retail store for $600. The store was able to supply the same coat for $350, although the dealer said that the order would be repeated the price would be $400, as far was going up.

The Treasury stores employ a force of clerks who are paid salaries just as high as they would get in retail stores. They also make deliveries, but they charge extra for these. All deliveries within a certain zone are 15 cents each, and those outside of that zone are 25 cents.

The stores are at present doing a business of about $100 a day, cash.

They seem to be attracting much favorable attention. Several congressmen have applied for membership, and have been admitted.

Local Products Used.

One way in which the Treasury stores expect to lower living costs is by using local products. For example, it plays up a certain flour made within 25 miles of Washington, which is a perfectly good flour and can be sold at a profit for $2 less a barrel than the high-grade patented flour. It offers the patented flour for those who want them. In like manner, it sells butter locally made in preference to paying 7 or 8 cents for an advertiser's butter which has been shipped thousand miles or more. It hopes to establish a growing community with the local farmers. For example, if a farmer who wants a washing machine for his wife, the store might get it for him at cost, and he might repurchase by storing the store's rock-bottom price on a tub of butter.

One of the most interesting things about the Treasury stores is their manager, J. G. McGrath. He is a fine, imposing-looking man; white hair and mustache, of the southern colonial type. He is about the last word in that you would expect to find in launching a new idea in the face of opposition and prejudice. Nevertheless he is the acknowledged leader of the Treasury store movement here in Washington. He lives for co-operative stores. They are his hobby. He does a large part of his life's work in the Treasury store. He has been so busy since the war started that he has not had time to buy a suit of clothes. The other day he was buying through a rush order for a suit and overcoat so that he could go to New York and get an inside price on shoes from a famous shoe magnate.

Managed Several Stores.

Mr. McGrath was manager of the co-operative store of the Park View district, which is a well-known success in reducing the cost of living, and which was the model and inspiration for many other community stores. Later Mr. McGrath was prime organizer of the Consumers' League of the district, which is to be a buying organization drawing its members from the entire city. This organization is still being organized. It has an excellent prospect of success. Mr. McGrath devotes most of his leisure to it.

The community buying idea is especially strong in Washington, because the government clerk is so hard put to meet the cost of living. The postoffice department has had a successful co-operative store for some time. The interior department has also organized one. The bureau of standards has one of the English plan, by which goods are sold at highest retail prices and the profits divided among the stockholders.

The Treasury stores have an aggregate of 35,000 employees to draw upon. If they are a success, they will raise the co-operative store to a high place in the capital. Mr. McGrath believes that community organization is the one and only way to beat the high cost of living. He also believes that it will be the means of bringing down the class lines upon which our present industrial warfare is based. He is not, however, much of a theorist, but takes chief pride in his ability as a buyer of groceries and dry goods. He is averse to publicity, and is here described and analyzed much against his will.

We do not aim to usurp the duties of the society writer, but we cannot refrain from publishing the following account of a fashionable up-state wedding as reported in the local paper:

Then last of all came the radiant bride on the arm of her father. She was gowned in the infinite charms of bridal white gleaming and quivering from effluence under a veil of graceful billows. The soft satin was easily draped into a becoming skirt that trailed on so satisfactory behind. The cap to the bewitching veil was formed by an ornament of tulle and pearls making a band about the head.

"During the service the gracious glances of the bride could not disturb the grooves of the old-fashioned moments, and now the days of friendship have lost their dominion and joyous affection holds absolute sway. Two hearts that have fled on the soft-swaying pinion, kind Heaven has bound for eternal day.

SOMETHING WRONG WITH THE FLOUR.

(Received by a Milling Company.)
Dear Sir—What are you doing with the flour? There is a little of it in our flour and we did not believe the people about it and so I see that is true. What shall we do with it, and there some came about it, and we have it in a good dry place, and I did not think about it so we do believe it. We had bought flour from Henry and kept it for four months, and it did not turn into such things as that. What will we do with it, or send it back, or not come with it and look about it, there was some reason about it. It is some old flour you had. And answer soon back. And it isn't only three months we got it.

CHAPTER III
The End of the Game

It must have been nearly midnight before I finally decided to seek a few hours' rest below. Descending the short ladder and reaching the bright light of the open deck for one last glance ahead. Some time the next day we were to be in St. Louis, and this expectation lent a brightness to my thoughts. I turned back along the deserted deck, only pausing a moment to glance carelessly in through the front window at the cabin. The forward portion was wrapped in darkness, and unoccupied, but beyond, toward the rear of the long saloon, a gathered throng of men were seated at a small table, above which a swinging lamp burned brightly, the rays of light falling on the various faces. Gambling was in vogue on the great river in those days, gambling for high stakes, and surely no ordinary game, involving a small sum, was in vogue among these men. Some instinct told me that the chief players would be Kirby and Beaucaire, and with a sinking heart I opened the cabin door and entered. No one noted my approach, or so much as glanced up, the attention of the crowd riveted upon the players. The four bold cards—the judge, Kirby, Carver and McAfee—I judged at a glance that the latter two were merely in the game as a pretense, the real thing being ready gone far beyond the limit of their resources. Without a thought as to the cards they held my eyes sought the face of the man who sat opposite me, and then I saw the staked displayed on the table before them. McAfee and Carver were clearly enough out of it, their cards still as dead as the cards they held, and breathlessly forward to observe more closely the play. The judge sat upright, his attitude strained, staring down at his hand, his face white and eyes burning feverishly. That he had been drinking heavily was evident, but Kirby frowned him in apparent cold indifference, his fingers cool and unshaking, with the cards he held bunched in his hands and entirely concealed from view. Between the two rested a stack of gold coins, not of crushed bills, but of the pattern of some kind, the exact nature of which I could not determine. It was evident that a fortune already rested on the table, awaiting the flip of a card. The silence, the breathless attention, convinced me that the crisis had been reached—it was the judge's move, he must cover the last bet or throw down his hand a loser. Prepiration beaded his forehead, and he crunched the cards savagely in his hands. His glance fell on me, and though he saw nothing of my face, he saw that I was not of his race.

Dinner Stories

"You need more exercise, my man."
"Exercise, doctor. I'm a piano player."
"What do you mean?"
"That I will accept your niggers as covering up for my laziness."
Kirby smiled broadly.
"The whole bunch—field hands and house servants. Most of them are old; I doubt if altogether they will bring that amount, but I'll take the risk. Throw in a blanket bill of sale, and we'll turn up our cards. If you won't do that the pile is mine as it stands."
Beaucaire again wet his lips, staring at the uncovered cards in his hands. He could not lose; with what he held no combination was possible which would beat him. Yet in spite of this knowledge the cold, sneering confidence of Kirby brought with it a strange fear. The man was a professional gambler. What gave him such recklessness? Why should he be so eager to risk such a sum on an inferior hand? McAfee, sitting next him, leaned over, managed to gain a swift glimpse at what he held, and eagerly whispered to him a word of encouragement. The judge straightened up in his chair, grasped at his elbow and gulped down the contents. The whispered words, coupled with the fiery liquor, gave him fresh courage.

He was about to ask her father for her hand in marriage, but he did not feel nervous. As he carefully brushed his hand he repeated for the last time the mainly little speech that he had prepared.
"Mr. Smooth, I have called to tell you, quite frankly, that your daughter Ethel and I love each other, and to ask for your consent to our marriage. I am not a rich man, I know, but we are both young, and strong, and willing to fight the battle of life together."
And so on.
It was not until he found himself alone with her father that his collar grew suddenly tight and his eyesight faded.
He plunged:
"Mr. Smooth, I—er—ahem! I—ah—frankly came to—er—hum—tell you—er—quite frankly that you—that we—that is I—ah—love your daughter! Ahem! I—ah—have—frankly called to—er—ask you to—ah—to—er—to be my—er—wife. That is—er—she—we—er—I—no! We are young and strong, and will fight I—ah—hope, sir, you—er—understand me!"
And father did—that's the wonderful part of it!

"They say food is going to be cheap pretty soon," remarked the hopeful chap.
"So," said the man who loves to look on the dark side; "it isn't going to be cheap—it will merely seem cheap by comparison."

The Daily Novelette

CURED.
(In substantiation of this other, was almost improbable but perfectly possible story, we wish to call attention to several historically authentic facts concerning medical science.)
On the 12th of August, 1922 B. C. Ximbasch Gulk discovered that water, when mixed with sugar, has a pleasant sweetish taste.
On the 13th of January 15 A. D. Kabu Zamzani discovered that a finger, once chopped off, will not grow again. It is recorded, that Professor Zamzani found a starfish, cut it up and saw before his eyes, the five points grow out again. Delighted, he ran home, and having three crooked fingers which had always been a source of shame to him, he picked up a hatchet and chopped them off, hoping to see three beautiful straight ones grow out again.
Thirdly, on the 21st of November, 1936 A. D., it was announced by Dr. Venetius Sneeze that, while performing a surgical operation on a human being, his pain may be completely numbed, if a sufficiently hard blow on the head to make the patient unconscious is delivered just before. And furthermore, if a blow, even harder than that was given, the patient wouldn't have to be operated upon at all.—Ed. Morning Glory.)

Two masked men stood threateningly over Eliphaz Zoos, as he lay prostrate before them.
"Surely, his life was in these men's hands."
"Is it appendicitis?" one asked the other.
"I think so," responded the other. "We'll probe anyway." And he removed the patient's diamond scarf pin, a bejeweled wrist-watch, $1.99 in cash and a recipe for making raisinless raisin pie. Then he tickled his stomach with the knife.
"Shall I cut him straight or on the bias, doctor? Which cut is it to be?"
"Surely, I'll cut him straight, and jumping up. And swinging his arms around in a significant manner, he left the two doctors senseless around the operating table.
"Twas an upper-cut.

Flu Caused President Wilson's Sickness

Physicians claim that President Wilson is suffering from neurasthenia or nervous exhaustion. This, they claim, is the after effect of an attack of influenza which he had last April, while he was in Paris attending the Peace conference. There are hundreds of thousands of people today who are still suffering some benefit from last year's attack of influenza.
Doctors are agreed that the Flu is coming back this Fall, and now that cooler weather is here, they are afraid it will break out any time. Even if one recovers from the Flu, the after effects are terrible. The only thing to do is to prevent the Flu.
Influenza can be prevented, last year's results prove that. As a preventive for Flu, Turpo has been an effective germicide combining the old-fashioned remedies of turpentine (which has always been known as the best home germicide) with camphor and menthol in a pure mineral base. These ingredients have long been a pronounced success. Turpo is recognized as effective, germicide as well as having really wonderful qualities in relieving colds and congestions. Snuff a little Turpo up the nostrils several times a day, and the only germs will have little chance of getting a lodging and breeding place. Many physicians and hospitals use and recommend Turpo.
Buy a thirty cent jar of Turpo, while you can get it for this price, and use as directed. Last year druggists could not supply the demand. Remember that Turpo is a preventive, not a cure for influenza. Take care of yourself.—Advertisement.

WITH BADGERS IDLE FOUR SHARP CONTESTS MARK TODAY'S GAMES

Chicago, Nov. 8.—Eight teams will swing into action in the renewal of hostilities for the western conference football championship this afternoon, with interest centering in the games between Michigan and Chicago at Chicago, and Illinois and Minnesota at Minneapolis. In the other two conference struggles, Ohio State, only undefeated in the west, will meet Purdue at Columbus, while Northwestern and Iowa will clash at Evanston.

clash between Chicago and Michigan—the Yale-Howard game of the west—will be the first real struggle between these gridiron foes since Michigan going into the season of 1905. Indications were Friday night that a crowd of 25,000 persons would witness the contest, as every reserved seat has been sold, and standing room will be sold for $1 a foot. The Wolverines reached Chicago on Friday, later going into the stadium for a brief workout at the Northwestern university field.

The Michigan eleven is not the formidable team of former years, but is regarded as a fighting aggregation, with the slight error and turn a seeming defeat into victory. After the season's ups and downs, experts are unwilling to hazard a guess on the outcome of today's combat. Injuries, however, threaten to weaken Chicago, the team of the most efficient linemen—Jackson and McGuffee, probably will be out of the game.

The Illinois-Minnesota game is expected to develop into a desperate struggle, with the odds slightly favoring Minnesota, which upset calculations a week ago by trouncing Wisconsin. The teams are playing at the top of their form and practically the same lineups that took the field against Chicago and Wisconsin last Saturday will go into action today. Experts believe that if Illinois can defeat the Gophers, the downstate players will have an excellent chance of winning from Ohio on Nov. 22.

Nothing short of a miracle will enable Purdue to overcome Ohio today. The Ohioans have been reported to be on edge. Iowa is expected to win over Northwestern, as the Hawkeyes have won all of their recent games in the history of the institution. The only game Iowa lost this season was to Illinois by a two point margin.

Gilt Games in East

New York.—Eastern football approaches the climax of the season today with the playing of one of the classic contests in the history of the game. The contest will weigh heavily in the final alignment of the eleven. From many angles the Harvard-Yale game is the most important of the season. The Harvard-Yale game, thousands of alumni will watch the scoring with keenest interest.

Notre Dame comes out of the west for its annual scrimmage with the Army eleven. Judging from the record of the visitors the game will be a hard one to play. The Army will be expected to hold the fast and versatile Indiana eleven in check. Pittsburg is another team to enter the fray. The game will be a return, the locals having defeated the Fairies a week previous. The clubs will meet again November 19.

Badgers Out to Grab Off Cross-Country from Iowa

Madison, Nov. 8.—If the Wisconsin university cross-country team defeats Iowa university when they race at Ames, Ia., today, the Badgers will feel sure of winning at the Big Ten cross-country conference run, to be staged at Columbus, O., preceding the Illinois-Ohio game on Nov. 22.

Wisconsin and Iowa universities are looked on as the favorites in the Big Ten track field. Iowa has a team composed of men who last year won the championship for Iowa. Wisconsin has a strong line with the exception of Dennis, substituted for Taylor, the team is the same as that which defeated Minnesota on a five mile track last Friday.

TIGERS HELPED BY HARVARD'S LOSS OF LEFT TACKLE KECK

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 8.—Princeton is ready for Harvard. At the conclusion of yesterday's brief signal practice, Head Coach Roper expressed himself as satisfied with the condition of the men and promised that a fighting football team would take the field to do battle with Harvard today.

The Orange and Black adherents took the loss of Keck, the star left tackle, philosophically. Bigler's showing in the last practice yesterday was a finished performance and in his Tigers' admirers are confident in his ability to fill Keck's shoes. Everywhere among Princeton backers there was evident the feeling expressed by "Big Bear" Edwards, captain of the 1909 championship eleven, that "Princeton cannot be beaten."
